FACTORY RE-OPENS
13 January 2027

At Etvaal, we remain committed to manufacturing quality furniture locally while providing our customers with dependable service, competitive pricing and long-term value.

Over the past year, the South African manufacturing environment has experienced renewed cost pressure across several key areas. Inflation at manufacturing level has remained considerably higher. Fuel and transport costs have been a particularly significant contributor. These increases have a much broader impact than transport alone, filtering through to the cost of raw materials, supplier deliveries, packaging, warehousing and final distribution.

In addition, we have experienced further supplier increases across several of our key manufacturing inputs, including board, timber, hardware, edging, packaging and other components.

Another challenge has been the continuation surcharges introduced by certain suppliers during previous periods of international disruption. In some instances, these surcharges have remained in place. Subsequent annual or general supplier price increases have now been applied in addition to these existing surcharges rather than replacing or reducing them. The result is an additional layer of cost escalation that could not have been anticipated in our previous pricing structures.

Throughout this period, Etvaal has deliberately absorbed a significant portion of these increases rather than immediately passing them on to our customers. We have continued to focus on production efficiencies, strategic sourcing, waste reduction, improved purchasing and careful operational cost management.

Following a comprehensive review of our manufacturing and supply-chain costs, Etvaal will therefore implement an average price adjustment of 2.95%, applicable to all deliveries from 1 October 2026.

We recognise that price adjustments affect our customers' businesses as well as our own, and this decision has therefore not been taken lightly. We remain committed to managing our costs responsibly and to working closely with our customers as market conditions continue to evolve.

Thank you for your continued support, trust and partnership with Etvaal. We sincerely value your business and look forward to continuing to serve you.

Should you have any questions regarding the revised pricing, please do not hesitate to contact us.
